Excerpt: . . . therefore, leave the tourniquet or pad in position as long as you dare, say two hours. In the meantime procure an antiseptic compress or have one prepared in the manner already described. Place this gently on the wound and bandage firmly in place so as to make strong pressure on the Fig. 38. --Tourniquet Applied to Femoral Artery. bleeding point. The pressure-between the heart and the wound may now be gradually released. If the bleeding does not recommence, well and good; if it does, the tourniquet or pad must be reapplied. Another attempt to remove it should not be made for at least an hour, as time is needed for the clot to reform. Suppose, at first, and this is by no means improbable, that you have failed to stop the bleeding by pressure between the heart and the bleeding point--there is still no reason why you should become panicstricken. Of course you do not want to put your fingers in the wound as this will be very likely to infect it, but in case of a severe arterial hemor-rhage which you are unable to check by pressure between the heart and the bleeding point you must at once make pressure on the cut artery in the wound. If you have an antiseptic compress or a surgically clean cloth to put over your fingers, which are used to make direct pressure, so much the better, as this will prevent infection; but do not wait to...
